CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. CONCLUSION

In this chapter the conclusion that can be summarized from the whole research are :

1. Among three kinds of degree words namely compariosn, intensification, and approximation proposed by MacKenzie (1985), the writer found 2 data of comparison and 18 data of intensification. There is no degree words of approximation found in this novel.

2. The syntactic structure of adjective modified by degree words can be analyzed from adjective phrase by determining degree words and adjective.

3. Degree adverb is the sub dicipline of semantic. From the whole analysis, this research will give information that degree adverb can give several meanings which are comparison, intensification, and approximation. It will surely give beneficial knwoledge to English learners.

4. Tree diagram is a part of syntax. By analyzing tree diagram, English learners will know the part of speech and sentence structure. Tree diagram is used to explain the structuce of phrase or sentce from general to specific part in this research.

5. The use of percentages in this study shows that the type of degree words of intensiveiers has a high percentage in its appearance, which have 90%, then a comparison of 10%, and no approximation is found.

6. The result of this whole research is expected to provide understanding to the reader that in the life of communication degree words are often used to modify adjectives to emphasize to the meaning of speech. Also used an analytical approach using the syntax field so that we can understand how the structure of a sentence containing degree words so as to produce a good grammar of speech or sentence.
