

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

It may be inferred that humanism is a human-owned idea that first appeared during the Renaissance and has continued to popular to the present day. Humanism is a school of thinking that promotes humanity's value and position; as a result of its existence, intellectual, philosophical, and larger knowledge will continue to flourish. Humanism includes a number of characters that might be utilized as a point of reference for someone. After examining the previous chapter, the writer discovered 20 facts from the film Child 44 in the form of and came to the following conclusion:

1. Leo Demidov is the main character in the film. He is a protagonist and a round character, where there is development in his character during the moves the storyline. There are four characteristics of humanism in Leo Demidov that have been proposed by Richard Norman (2004) and Robin Headlam Wells (2006), namely wisdom, human nature, morality, and freedom. There are 4 data of wisdom category or 20% of percentage, 8 data of human nature category or 40% of percentage, 5 data of morality category or 25% of percentage, and 3 data of freedom category 15% of percentage.
2. The depiction of the four characters of humanism as evidenced by the actions of Leo Demidov. To begin with, wisdom is shown in Leo from how he gave wise advice and did not judge others solely on emotion, but in fairly. In addition, human nature revealed by liberal knowledge the common state of human nature, behavior of gentleness and recognition of his mistakes in the past. Hereafter, Leo portrayed his morality by showing his sympathy, care for orphans, upholding justice, and avoiding violence in his mission. Furthermore, Leo's freedom demonstrated when he ran away from the orphanage and expressed his opinions and desires.

B. Suggestion

The writer intended to provide suggestions for research based on the analysis above that will be valuable in the future for researchers, and readers.

1. Researchers

- a. Since humanism has many other aspects to study, the researchers should explore further ideas of humanism especially humanism and its character.
- b. As a reference, the researchers can use this research as an aid in collecting related information in further research.
- c. By evaluating this research, the researchers are expected to be able to develop humanism research.

2. Readers

- a. Readers are expected to broaden their knowledge of humanism, particularly the characters in humanism.
- b. The writer suggests that the readers relate their understanding of humanism to people's actions in everyday life.

