CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusion

Autobiography is the easy way for the author to introduce the history of his life in the books to the reader and especially for the people that begin to read history books. Autobiography may have various to tell about different story that is interested and the reader can know the truth of the history in the autobiography. Language has important role in autobiography because it is the communication tool for delivering message to the reader. Therefore, it is important to study and analyze the semantic approach to identify and classify the parts of word to understand it meaningfully about autobiography. A semantic approach and the goals in the autobiography have been analyzed in the previous chapter. From the data analysis, it can be concluded a few things:

1. The explicit conclusion of the data analyzed above is from the meaning, proposition, and implication. These notions of semantic discourse can be show in the semantic approach of the data analysis.

2. The implicit conclusion in the data analysis is meaning. The meaning and implication are according to the opinion by the reader or listener based on the true aspect of semantic approach.

3. Proposition is to make discourse identified correctly in grammatical rules and meaning. The relation among semantic discourses is to make good texts of a story.

Based on the semantic approach on above, this study is expected to be useful both theoretically and practically. Theoretically, it can add the wealth of research in the field of discourse analysis, especially the semantic approach in the autobiography. Then, practical benefits and meaning here is the reader to improve knowledge to understand meaning of semantic approach in order to be more observant in explaining discourses as well as understand the notions of semantic approach.

B. Suggestion

In this research the writer expects the readers to be able to understand easily about semantic discourse analysis based on notions of semantic approach which are meaning, proposition, and implication as well as the using of the notions of semantic approach.

1. For Readers

For readers who are interested in linguistics, it will help them to analyze the discourse analysis semantically and how they are able to identify and classify text meaningfully. It also can help the next researcher who would like to take another research about semantic approach analysis in autobiography.

2. For Students

For the student who study linguistics, especially in semantic, they are expected to understand about meaning, proposition, and implication which understand not only about structure content but also how the semantic discourse notions has correct meaning in semantic. It can help the student more understand about the meaning of part in words.

3. For Teachers

For teachers who teach linguistics, it can be helpful to share students with some example about semantic discourse analysis in semantic approach notions in autobiography. It can also be an assessment for the students to do some research about it.

4. For the Next Researchers

The content of this research of structure is only focus on meaning, proposition, and implication which is well known as notions of semantic discourse analysis. The writer suggest the next researcher to do further research on semantic discourse.

4. For the Library

For the library, this research need very much linguistic references, especially semantic books. The writer suggests the library to add more semantic books with new publication and add E-book in library.
